5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

A CALIFORNIA correspondent writes to the Manchester (Eng.) Courier as follows: "I have for a long time wondered why no steps have been taken by England for protecting her own industries. As for expecting free trade with America, it is simply ridiculous to think of such a thing. Look at the result of the last Presidential election. I have spoken to many intelligent Americans, and they laugh at the idea of free trade. They don't want it, and will not have it. America has grown up under protection, and they intend to let well enough alone. Now there is one thing I would presume to give my opinion upon, and that is flour. Why not impose a duty of something like 5 shillings per barrel, or I would say, 5 shillings on every 200 pounds, either in barrels or bags, or any other form of package, and charge it on the gross weight? Admit all of the wheat, maize, oats, beans, peas, etc., duty free, but on anything manufactured from these articles impose a duty. Better flour can be made in Great Britain, or at any rate as good as can be made here. More flouring-mills would be required, and more hands employed, and then you would have the bran and offal for feeding purposes. I can look back for nearly sixty years and well remember when splendid flour used come to Liverpool from Ireland, particularly from Limerick, Galway and Dublin, and now cargoes go direct from this place to Dublin, Limerick, Donegal, Belfast and other places. I think I am right in saying that there is something practically wrong in all this. Admit the raw material as much as you like, but certainly not the manufactured article. I send with this a sketch taken from one of the Eastern States papers, representing a poor London half-starved workman, who is struggling for a few cents per day more wages, standing in an open box, labeled 'Cobden Club, Free-Trade,' and behind him on his knees is John Bull. In the background is represented a meeting taking place addressed by an agitator, in one of the London squares, in favor of an advance in wages. In the foreground is an American workman, who has hold of a little worm-eaten looking Democrat by the collar, saying: 'A nice box you and the Democracy would have got us into, you little, Anglo-maniac Free-Trade idiot!'"

It is reported in Vienna that the army wants more pay, is in sympathy with the workmen and likely to fraternize with them on May day. The situation is very much like that in France one hundred years ago, although there is less political discontent to complicate matters. If Emperor William, as reported, has changed his mind about giving the German workmen liberty of demonstration his confidence in his policy of conciliation of the laboring classes is very weak and short-lived. Vacillation will not make him solid with any class of his people.

THE representative of a San Francisco mercantile house now in New York finds that dried fruits are coming into favor over canned goods. That is, says the Bulletin, a favorable turn, because California growers can dry fruits by domestic labor at a minimum of expense and keep a larger share of the profits than by selling green fruit to canning companies. At the prices now demanded for dried fruits there is a great opening for cheapening them and enlarging the market.

SENATOR CULLOM's report upon the discriminations practiced against American commerce by Canadian canals and railroads, in contravention of treaty agreements, not only calls for prompt and vigorous action by our State Department, but also gives excellent reasons for pushing the Niagara canal project. That will make us independent.

ATTENTION is called to the letter of Hon. A. J. Warner in to-day's GAZETTE, in which he undoubtedly satisfies the gold bugs on both sides of the Atlantic that he has a pretty clear conception of how silver was demonetized in 1873.

THE effort of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to give certain of our foreign Ministers the title of Ambassador, aims at something more than fuss and feathers. At present our representatives at European courts have to take a back seat in the presence of those of petty foreign States who carry the title of Ambassador, and the United States loses in dignity and prestige, and also in actual diplomatic precedence, as our Minister must cool his heels in an ante-room while an Ambassador precedes him, by virtue of this rank, in obtaining an audience. The Bulletin says it may be all ridiculous, but it is the rule, and we shall gain by governing ourselves accordingly.

BAR silver continues to jump, 105 having been reached to-day.

HOW SOME CREATURES FEED.

The clam feeds with a siphon, and the oyster with its beard.

The leech has three saws, with which it does good service in the phlebotomy line.

Spiders chew their food with horny jaws, which are sharp enough to give quite a nip.

The butterfly pumps nectar into itself through a tube, and bees and flies suck up their food with a long tongue or proboscis.

The tapeworm has neither mouth nor stomach, but just lays along and absorbs the already digested food through its skin.

Snails have teeth on their tongues, hundreds of them, but, as if these were not enough, some have them also in their stomach.

The woodpecker has a three-barbed tongue like a Filian's spear, with which it draws out the worm which it has excited by its tapping.

The sturgeon is toothless and draws in its food by suction, but the shark has hundreds of teeth set in rows that sometimes number ten.

The cuttlefish, which among other strange things, always walks with its head downward, does not chew its food at all, but masticates with its gizzard.

Toads, tortoises, turtles and most lizards have no teeth. Frogs have teeth in their upper jaw only. Ant-eaters, sloths and armadillos have no teeth.

The caterpillar feeds with two saw-edged jaws, working transversely, and uses them to such good advantage that he eats three or four times his own weight every day.

Grasshoppers and locusts are very well provided with the necessary machinery for eating much and often. They have saw-like jaws, and gizzards, too, the latter being fitted out with horny teeth.

The lion and the tiger, and, indeed, most of the carnivora, do not grind their food, using their jaws only up and down, the molars acting like chopping-knives, or, rather, scissars. Their mouths, in fact, are a veritable hash-mill.

The carp's teeth are set back on the pharynx, so that it may be literally said to masticate its food in its throat. The carp, too, is about the only end-chewing fish, the coarsely-scaled food being forced up to these throat teeth for complete mastication.

Does seize their food with their jaws, cats with their feet, and so do monkeys, some of them pressing their prehensile tails into service. The squirrel uses its paws to carry its food to its mouth; the elephant its trunk, the giraffe, ant-eater and toad their tongues.

The jelly-fish absorbs its food by wrapping itself about the object which it seeks to make its own. The starfish is even more accommodating. Fastening itself to the body it wishes to feed on, it turns its stomach inside out and envelops its prey with this useful organ.

The ray, or skate, for instance, has a mouth set transversely across its head. Its jaws working with a rolling motion, the two heads set back to back. In the jaws are three rows of flat teeth set like a mosaic pavement, and between these rolling jaws the fish crushes oysters and other mollusks like so many nuts.

LOBSTERS and crabs masticate their food with their horny jaws, but they have also sets of teeth in their stomachs, where they complete the work of chewing. But there is one peculiar kind of crab called the king or horseshoe-crab which chews its food with its legs. This is an actual fact, the little animal grinding its morsels between its thighs before it passes them over to its mouth.

TOLD OF THE TITLED.

QUEEN VICTORIA recently ordered her baker to make her an American apple pie.

LEOPOLD, King of the Belgians, is over six feet high. He is possessed of fine literary tastes and geography is his hobby.

THE Crown Prince of Sweden and Norway during his recent stay at Meran adopted two little Tyrolean boys, sons of a poor carpenter, and they are now members of his household at Stockholm.

The Emperor William has issued an order that in future no paintings or statues or busts of himself or of any members of the royal family, either alive or dead, are to be purchased with any public funds for galleries or public buildings.

THE Queen of Sweden delights in forced meat balls, fried in sweet olive oil and served with poached eggs, and always the national dish of raw salmon preserved in the ground and smoked to perfection as the great feature. French wines figure on the royal table.

THE late Empress Augusta always said that the month of January was fatal to monarchies. She was greatly shocked when she heard of the suicide of the Crown Prince of Austria, because it confirmed her belief in the sinister nature of January, in which it occurred. When she was taken ill with the influenza she said: "It is January; I shall die."

AN American who recently saw the King and Queen of Portugal says: "The King is a fine-looking young man, about thirty years of age, decidedly blonde, of medium height, well built and with a graceful carriage. The Queen, who is a daughter of the Comte de Paris, is considered beautiful, but if she were not a Queen would probably be called simply a very pretty woman."

THE little King of Spain's first demand when he began to get well was that he should be taken "to see the lame beggar," a cripple for whom he has formed a great attachment, and who is allowed to come to the side of the carriage and hold long conversations with the young monarch, when he is out for an airing. The King is very self-willed as he grows older, and will only yield to his mother when she tells him she is going to her room to cry. That always wins him over.

EMPEROR FREDERICK's death probably destroys the Duke of Cumberland's last hope of recovering the large private fortune of which he was practically robbed by the German Government. Old Emperor William wanted to restore it to him but Prince Bismarck overruled

THE LITERARY EDITOR.

Something Concerning the Acceptance or Rejection of Manuscripts.

It seems a pet idea with some authors to trouble themselves over the oft-mooted question: "Are all the manuscripts which come to magazines carefully read?" There are some manuscripts that go unread, for the reason that their unworthiness is apparent from the opening page and often from the opening sentence. Or their unsuitability will be revealed from their subject title, and it is then that the editorial decision is made regardless of the literary merit which the article may possess.

The most attractive and best-composed articles are oftentimes to which unsolicited for the magazine and therein comes the task of correct application so often lacking with authors. But of the thousands of manuscripts sent to the magazines each year, each one receives examination, some more, some less—precisely in proportion to their relative merit, and of this authors can always feel assured. The funny paragrapher has magnified the editor's waste basket far beyond its normal proportions. In reality, but few manuscripts are assigned thereto, and those which do find their way therein richly deserve the treatment.

Reputable publications will always return manuscripts where postage is enclosed, except in special instances, and then the declaration is always made in some conspicuous place of the periodical. Authors, as a rule, are safer in the hands of the editor to-day than they were twenty years ago. If the literary supply has increased, so has the demand.

The fact is, whether authors believe it or not, the editor is more anxious to discover merit in a manuscript than is the author to have him. Novelty and freshness are today the ruling elements in literature, and the editor is ever watchful for either in all the manuscripts which come under his eye. If authors would devote more time and care to the composition of their manuscripts and less to worrying over what became of them after they reached the editorial desk literature and the reading public would be the gainers. No author need ever invest her soul with anxiety that her manuscript is not read. In these days of sharp literary competition the keenest outlook is required of the editorial room, and a good manuscript or a bright idea need not search long for a publisher. Well-told stories are not so plentiful that even the most unpromising-looking manuscript can afford to be overlooked. An author can always feel sure of one point—that if her manuscript is returned there is some reason for it, and the cause is generally not very far off or obscure, if search is only made for it. Either the production lacks merit or the wrong channel has been selected for the material. These are generally the two principal reasons. There is a world of common sense in the remark made by a famous author to a young writer who was loudly complaining of editorial unappreciation: "Don't waste so much time blaming the editors; devote more to seeing if any rests upon you."—Ladies' Home Journal.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—In Iceland there are 200 Lutheran churches, with a population of 70,000.

—Parents should never bribe their children. Teach them to do that which is right because it is right, and not because of the penny or the orange you will give them.

—At Columbia City, Cal., a church organization under the name of "The Comouters" has been carrying on a series of meetings. The members claim that they are without sin, and are the chosen of the Lord.

—Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., lately received a rare and valuable gift from an alumnus, Marcus L. Tatt, of Brooklyn, N. Y. It is some 1,500 Chinese coins representing every dynasty and every Emperor, some of them antedating several hundred years the Christian era.

—Miss Hanky, the first woman ever graduated at Columbia, is to be commemorated by a window in the college library. The design is an allegorical representation of her career as a scholar, cut short by death. There are three principal figures, those of science, an angel, and a student.

—Jay Gould, it is said, pays $2,500 for a pew in Dr. Hall's church. Although fairly regular at the morning service he never appears in the evening. Russell Sage, on the contrary, is in his slip at both services. The combined contributions of these financial Christians are estimated at $10,000 a year, or $1,000 a month. All nameless offerings of $500 or more, which are by no means rare, are attributed to these gentlemen.

—Croaker—"Madam, I suggest that you send this chicken pie to the United States navy." Mrs. Coldham—"For mercy's sake, what would the navy do with it?" Croaker—"Well, it might come in handy to 'repell boarders,' you know."—America.

CURRENT ODDITIES.

ONE of the latest achievements of science is the invention of pads for hollow-checked women.

WHILE sinking a well in the Santa Lucia range, San Luis Obispo County, a farmer exhumed the fossil vertebrae of a whale. His well is 2,500 feet above sea level.

The landlord of a public house at Birmingham has a canary bird that can speak several words distinctly, having learned them from a parrot with which it had been brought up.

ABOUT half of the electric clocks in Danbury, Conn., stopped a morning or two since. Investigation showed that the circuit had been destroyed by a man who cut off a piece of wire to tie up his stove-pipe.

A PETIFIED tree was found recently in a coal mine at Osnabruck, Germany. The trunk is almost four feet through, and the roots cover a surface about fifteen feet square. The tree has been set up in a special room in the Berlin School of Mines.

By the use of the photograph it is now possible for a man to sing at his own funeral. Captain Frank Cunningham, of Richmond, Va., who has sung at three hundred and ninety-five funerals, means to have his voice heard in melody at his own obsequies.

A NOVEL wedding took place in Wilkesbarre a few days since. The combined ages of the bridal party was two hundred and sixty-nine years, the bridegroom being eighty-one, the bride sixty-one, the groom's best man sixty-three, the bride's maid sixty-four. The bride was dressed in her first wedding tress, which was made forty-two years ago. The bride was as frisky as a young girl of seventeen, and the bridegroom climbed three flights of steps on a time beat, and performed the feat with the agility of a youth.

JEWELS AND LACES.

"Oh, girl with the jeweled fingers, Oh, girl with the lace rare!"

What are your jewels and what are your laces worth to you if, from undergoing the trying ordeal which fashionable society places on its devotees, enough to test the physical strength and endurance of the most robust, you break down, lose your health and become a physical wreck, as thousands do from such causes?

Under such circumstances you would willingly give all your jewels and all your laces to regain lost health. This you can do if you will but resort to the use of that great restorative known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Thousands of grateful women bless the day it was made known to them.

For all derangements, irregularities and weaknesses peculiar to women, it is the only remedy, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

An invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system. For feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon.
